Rémy ABRAHAM: Générique

Rémy ABRAHAM, formerly a horn player with the Strasbourg Philharmonic Orchestra, has long served as resident composer and conductor of Eurocivres Asia. He has previously visited Taiwan as a guest instructor. ABRAHAM is particularly known for customizing his arrangements to each ensemble's abilities and instrumentation, earning praise from both students and faculty. In just over a minute, his Générique makes full use of the distinctive qualities of the brass family. The piece provides an effective introduction to the sound world of a brass ensemble, leaving a lasting impression on audiences.

G. GABRIELI: *Canzon septimi toni a 8, Ch. 172

Giovanni GABRIELI was one of the most influential composers of the late Italian Renaissance, active during the transition from the 16th to the 17th centuries. At the time, Venice was a thriving center of musical innovation, providing fertile ground for composers to experiment with new forms and sonorities. The term canzon derives from the Italian word for "song." Composed for St Mark's Basilica, where GABRIELI served as organist and composer, Canzon septimi toni a 8 was originally conceived for performers on opposite sides of the church, creating striking antiphonal effects as musical lines echoed across the basilica.

A. BRUCKNER: Abendzauber, WAB. 57 (arr. Mark GAAL)

Austrian composer Anton BRUCKNER is primarily known for his symphonies and organ works, but he also wrote several secular choral pieces. One such example is Abendzauber ("Evening Magic"), composed in 1878. The original version features a baritone soloist accompanied by four horns, whose sonorities evoke the sound of the Alphorn. The baritone carries the principal melody while the other voices provide a wordless humming accompaniment, creating a contemplative atmosphere that blends the beauty of nature with the serenity of a moonlit night. The piece also lends itself naturally to arrangement for brass ensemble.

Burkhard ROGGENBUCK: Saronic Trio for vibraphone and two marimbas

German percussionist and composer Burkhard ROGGENBUCK wrote Saronic in 2015. The title refers to the Saronic Gulf near Athens, Greece. Its warm and inviting landscape inspired the composer to capture his summer holiday memories through the sounds of vibraphone and marimbas. The piece begins with a leisurely Larghetto that captures the sensation of relaxing on a sunlit beach. As the music progresses, the tempo gradually accelerates to Presto, evoking the exhilaration of gliding over the waves with the sea breeze.

Léon BOËLLMANN: "Prière à Notre Dame" and "Toccata" from Suite Gothique, Op. 25

The term "Gothic" originally referred to one of the East Germanic tribes that were active in Europe between the 5th and 8th centuries. Over time, it became closely associated with medieval architecture. Beginning in the 18th century, the Gothic Revival emerged as a movement that rekindled fascination with medieval castles, vampires, and the supernatural. This movement inspired French composer Léon BOËLLMANN to write his Suite Gothique. With its minor-key melodies, rapid figurations, and rich bass sonorities, the piece captures the distinctive Gothic aesthetic, making it one of the most beloved works in the repertoire.

Kevin MCKEE: *Vuelta del Fuego

American trumpeter and composer Kevin McKEE is best known for his works for brass chamber ensembles. His piece Vuelta del Fuego, originally composed in 2008 for brass quintet, was inspired by his fascination with the legendary masked hero Zorro. The composition combines exaggerated romanticism, bold confidence, and dashing charm into a vivid musical portrait. Characterized by rapid, recurring brass figures, it evokes the image of a Robin Hood-like Latin hero, whose daring exploits and irresistible charisma capture the imagination.

E. GIGOUT: "Grand Chœur Dialogué" from 6 Pièces d'orgue (arr. E. SMEDVIG)

French organist and composer Eugène GIGOUT was an influential figure in the late 19th century and served as professor of organ at the Paris Conservatoire. Among his best-known works is "Grand Chœur Dialogué," which utilizes the various stops of a large pipe organ to create sonorities reminiscent of a full orchestra. The piece is built upon a dialogue-like structure between two contrasting musical voices. Its expansive sonorities and dramatic contrasts make it particularly effective in arrangements for brass ensemble and organ. It has also become a favorite among audio enthusiasts for testing the capabilities of high-fidelity sound systems.

Abraham MADURO: Metanoia

Abraham MADURO, a Venezuelan composer and double bassist, is a former member of the Simón Bolívar Symphony Orchestra and remains an active composer. His work, Metanoia, was written for brass ensemble and is inspired by the biblical themes of repentance and renewal. The title derives from the Greek term meaning "transformation of mind." The piece unfolds in a vivid, cinematic musical language, with evolving textures and constantly shifting musical ideas that reflect the introspective and transformative process suggested by its title.

Jacob DE HAAN: Oregon (arr. Rémy ABRAHAM)

Originally composed for symphonic wind band by Dutch composer Jacob DE HAAN, Oregon takes listeners on a train journey through diverse and dynamic landscapes in the American West. Encounters with Native Americans, cowboys, gold prospectors, and wagon trains evoke the spirit of frontier adventure and exploration through a series of vivid musical scenes. This performance features an arrangement by Rémy ABRAHAM for Eurocivres Asia.

R. HERNÁNDEZ: *El Cumbanchero

Puerto Rican composer Rafael HERNÁNDEZ was one of the most influential figures in Latin American music during the first half of the 20th century. A prolific composer, he produced over 3,000 works and helped shape the development of Latin American music.

One of his best-known compositions, El Cumbanchero, immediately immerses listeners in a vibrant Latin musical atmosphere through its energetic percussion. The repeated and driving brass melodies propel the music forward, creating an irresistible sense of exuberance and celebration.

Works marked with * are arranged by José José GIMÉNEZ MENDÍA.
